PREPOSITIONS FOR SUBORDINATION

Rewrite each group of sentences to express the subordinate idea in the form of a prepositional phrase. For some sentences, two subordinate ideas can be reduced to one prepositional phrase containing two objects.

EXAMPLE: There were swarms of gnats and flies. It was August.
In August, there were swarms of gnats and flies.

1. He was near the lake. He discovered two more cases of malaria.
2. Maria will drive to San Francisco next month. She will drive in her new car.
3. Robert was in summer camp. He was safe from his parents' overprotectiveness.
4. The old mansion had wide lawns. It also had well-kept gardens. It was certainly appealing.
5. She was in England. She had planned to attend the Shakespeare festival.
6. The performance was cheered by a thousand students. They were from three parochial schools.
7. Uncle Mike once lived in Tennessee. He lived with his youngest son.
8. There was waste. There was inefficiency. The new manager was determined to rid the company of these things.
9. The new membership lists had to be compiled. A week's time had been allowed.
10. The lecturer had sensitivity. In addition, she had wide experience. She was soon aware of the resistance of the audience.